

Marbella, Málaga

Málaga, a province in the southeast of Spain is renowned for its beautiful beaches on Costa del Sol. The capital, also called Málaga, was inhabited by Phoenicians, Carthaginians, Romans, and Moors over the course of its 2,000-year history. Fine examples of Paleolithic art adorn the walls of caves in the nearby city of Nerja. Marbella is a celebrated resort and one of the most celebrated tourist attractions on Costa del Sol. Beautiful beaches and wide-open spaces are ideal for sports, and its whitewashed houses and orange groves reflect the lively spirit of Andalusia.

Founded in 1989, Enforex is one of the largest networks of Spanish language schools for teens and young adults. With schools in Madrid, Barcelona, Marbella, Salamanca, Granada and Almuñécar, Enforex welcomes more than 15,000 foreign students to Spain each year. More than 3,000 teenagers from 42 countries attend its International Summer Camp Program. Enforex teachers are part of a dynamic and experienced staff. Lessons on Spanish language and culture are complemented by afternoon and weekend activities. The school carefully selects students' host families and other student housing options.

Salamanca

The city of Salamanca, World Heritage Site and Cultural Capital of Europe in 2002, is known for some of the most beautiful historical and architectural landmarks in Spain. The Plaza Mayor, the plateresque style of the Cathedral, the facade of the University, and the Church of San Esteban are just some of its must-see sites. The city is situated along the famed Silver Route taken in the early Middle Ages by the Al-Andalus Mozarabs to make pilgrimages to Santiago de Compostela. It is also part of the Castilian Language Route, which includes the most significant locations in the cradle of Castilian Spanish and its evolution throughout Spanish history.
